PRICKLY PEAR DAY SAIL

This little cay is pure paradise, lying a short distance off the coast of Anguilla. Completely deserted except for the two little restaurants that provide lunch to visitors, nobody lives on Prickly Pear. The restaurant staff travel over each day to be of service. This destination is all about relaxation. Palm trees bask in the sun while sugar birds dart through the restaurant. In addition to the three reefs for snorkeling, a walk around the island reveals great bird life. Simply gorgeous, Prickly Pear is a great choice for families with kids as the boat anchors for the day in one spot, with a nice long beach with shallow waters. Lunch is a choice of BBQ chicken, fish or ribs and the day is spent languidly snorkeling, swimming or sunbathing. The call to leave comes all too soon.

The Lambada 63' sail cat, was the first new breed of day charter cats to arrive in St. Maarten in 1996. The boats are very spacious with proper seating, a walk up bar and two restrooms. There are two nets up front which guests prize as prime positions to sunbathe while sailing, and an angled ladder that is lowered in the front for effortless access to and from the water when snorkeling.

Sun block, towels, cover ups, hats and extra cash should be brought along. Cameras are fine to bring on board as all bags can be stowed away. The bar is well stocked with beers, rum punch, sodas and wine.

Drinks, French baguette, Gouda cheese and apples are served while sailing. All snorkel gear is included on board, as well as belts which ensure safety, and lessons are available if required. Once at the destination, snorkelers and swimmers can swim to shore or the reefs while bags and non-swimmers can ride in the dinghy to the beach with the crew. All guests should bring along bathing suits.
